

We dare you not to stare at Shannon - and we bet you can't keep from laughing, either!

Quote of the Month

"For me, disability is a way of getting some extremity, some kind of very difficult situation, that throws an interesting light on people."

Stare at Shannon - Episode 10: Supermarket Edition

(03:36)

This month we'd like to introduce you to Shannon DeVido, actress and activist, and her fabulous webseries Stare at Shannon, which she created because, in her own words, "...if I'm going to be stared at, I might as well be doing something awesome!" In this episode, Shannon demonstrates how she can often get away with "pretty much anything I want."

Send this to your colleagues and see what they say. Does Shannon make fun of everything - including our attitudes towards disability? Look at her whole series to get an idea of the breadth and depth of her talent.

Three Reasons Why This is Worth Watching

1. Shannon's premise is funny and universally accessible (pun completely intended). We've all snuck a snack at the grocery store.
2. She is bold in her "experiment" and makes us question what we would do.
3. It's well shot, the audio is clear and well edited - this packs a punch in three and a half minutes.

There is so much exciting and well produced disability media available today. The challenge comes in knowing where to find it, what to pick and how to use it.

For our valued customers and friends, we are providing a monthly media recommendation that you can use in your trainings, classrooms, and share with your networks.

We appreciate your business and hope you think of us as a trusted source.
